

BRICHIOLE ALA BARBIANA

Wildwood Preparatory School was first imagined by a graduate of an Ivy League school, who wanted to make the kind of learning that leads to happiness available to anyone, anywhere in a beautiful setting, even if it began online. Wildwood is academically top notch, but above all, here is a consolation, an education, and a preparation for joy.

Many people outside of Italy have never heard of "Barbiani", the educational experiment of Lorenzo Milani. Milani wished to bring interactive educational methods to everyone, not simply the privileged. Now, many years later, he is becoming very popular.

Brichiole means "crumbs", since education does not happen by consuming all knowledge at once, but crumb by crumb, like a small bird. Often in the rush to learn large amounts of information, in a race to compete on the global market, we are not able to arrange the information in any kind of order, and we become mentally overwhelmed.

It is better to go slowly with wisdom and understanding, to give ourselves time to assimilate and grow. We may not become the largest corporation in the world this way, but we will also have a purpose to our education, which leads to general overall well being.

Wildwood School is a creation of the Valanga di Vita Company, Inc.
